SUBJECT: Revision and simplification of 12.1E1

Background

Rule 12.1E1 provides guidance on when to transcribe or supply other title information for serials and integrating resources. The rule as currently written has three categories that apply specifically to serials. However, the types of situations covered in the rule for serials also occur in integrating resources, and there does not seem to be a good justification for treating integrating resources differently.

The categories listed in 12.1E1a are as follows:

i) acronym or initialism appearing in the chief source of information with the full form of the title

Many home pages of organizations include both the full name of the organization as well as its acronym:

The same situation sometimes also occurs with other types of integrating resources:

ii) statement of responsibility or the name of a publisher, distributor, etc. is an integral part of the other title information

In this category, the rule calls for transcribing statements of responsibility or names of publishers, distributors, etc. as other title information because doing so clarifies the title proper and aids catalog users. Examples of integrating resources (in particular, Web sites) that illustrate this category abound:

- AlpacaInfo
- ScoutBase UK
- Colorado Chess Informant
- Prince Edward Island
iii) the title proper consists solely of the name of a corporate body, conference, etc.

Numerous examples of integrating resources whose title proper fits this category can be found, such as the American Library Association example above. Here are some others:

In the examples in this category, the application of 1.1E6 is appropriate and the addition of supplied other title information such as "[home page]" helps explain exactly what these resources are.

I believe that when these rules were incorporated into chapter 12 there was an oversight in limiting their application solely to serials. In the interests of simplicity and consistency whenever possible, the rules should apply to all continuing resources, not just serials.

The proposal below simplifies rule 12.1E1 and generalizes the application of the special categories to both serials and integrating resources. Examples of integrating resources have been added to each category. Also, explicit guidance is provided on what to do when multiple categories are applicable. This revised proposal also takes into account comments made at the ALA Midwinter Meeting in January 2003, as well as the formal response from the liaison from the American Association of Law Libraries.
Proposed Revision:
